How to Choose a Coffee Table

The size of the coffee table have be appropriate for the sofa. A decent rule of thumb is that the coffee table you purchase should be at least half as long as your sofa but not longer. A coffee table with a length of two-third or three-fourths is the ideal size. It is important that the height of the coffee table is roughly equal to the height of your sofa seat.

Types of Coffee Table

What kind of coffee table would be ideal for your sofa then? Obviously! It depends on the type of sofa you have. It is recommended to choose a rectangular or an oval coffee table for a horizontal sofa. On the other hand, choose a square and round-shaped coffee table to complement a sectional and L-shaped sofa. If you like any particular coffee table, you can certainly make it work according to proper guidelines.

Coffee Table Materials

Coffee tables are often made of brass, marble, glass, and wood. Below are some recommendations for each material:

Wood Coffee Table:

It comes in a variety of designs, forms, and sizes. Because it is warm, rich, timeless, and adaptable, manufacturers and customers adore this material. Oak, maple, walnut, and mahogany are the most often used hardwoods for coffee tables. The most popular softwood varieties are pine and cedar.

Brass Coffee Table:

It is often used in industrial designs; however, this style is not its only application. Brass coffee tables are strong and can weigh less than conventional wood ones. Metal may be easily formed into any shape by manufacturers. The value of this material is because it enables support structures and legs to be thinner. Customers appreciate that brass is cool to the touch and resistant to stains and water.

Glass Coffee Table:

When paired with metal support and joints or support structures, it looks really beautiful. Glass gives the area more visual space and an opulent luster. Such a table will never show stains, and you won't harm it if you periodically spill a drink on it.

Marble Coffee Table

Marble is an extremely fussy and demanding material. Some marble coffee tables, though not all, have coatings that guard the stone against stains, moisture, and scuffs. The best part is that stains on marble gradually dissolve over time; as they penetrate the stone more deeply, they eventually disappear entirely. However, you should definitely keep citrus and acid away from a marble coffee table since they will eat away at the marble or the polish.
